FURTHER EDUCATION IS CHANGING - DO YOU WANT TO PLAY YOUR PART?

Governors of Further Education Colleges

The further education sector is currently undergoing major changes including the merging of the existing 16 colleges into 6 which will take place during 2007. The Department for Employment and Learning is seeking to appoint people with a background in business, industry or any profession to be members of the new college governing bodies, to help them deliver high quality education and support the economic and social life of Northern Ireland.

If you think you have the skills and experience to help further education meet its challenges in the future, we have produced an information pack containing full details of the roles and responsibilities of governors, including person specification and an application form.

Current applicants for these posts should note that the competition has been extended and that their application still stands - there is no need to re-apply. Women, disabled people, members of ethnic minority groups and young people are currently under-represented on the governing bodies and applications from these groups would be particularly welcome.

The information pack can be obtained by contacting:
